A Party from the Another State Visits the Mammoth Cave.

A party composed of Dr. Longworth and wife, William Coker and wife, Misses Nellie Longworth, Katie Benson, Connie Lanster, Mrs. J. W. Campbell and O. R. Wheeler of Owensboro, Hamilton County, Ill., passed through this place on Thursday last, on their return from the Mammoth Cave. The party sought the romantic mode of travel—that of covered wagons, camping out at night, and hunting and fishing along the route; and out for the inevitable rain, would have had a delightful trip. They remained three days at the Cave, and any that it came fully up to their expectations.

Prof. J. D. Crow, the subject of this article, is entitled to more than ordinary praise. He was reared in an obscure portion of this country, with but little opportunity of obtaining an education— even though usually acquired in sparsely settled neighborhoods. In this instance he grew almost to manhood. But he was endowed with more than ordinary natural facilities, and having a keen perception and appreciation of the benefits resulting therefrom, set out in earnest, and by his own industry, perseverance and close application to his studies, acquired a first class education. Although quite young, he has occupied the position as principal of several different high schools of the State—giving satisfaction, so far as we have learned, in every respect. He will leave in a short time for Virginia University, where he will take the law course. We predict for him a bright future.

Brooke Jail.

Jeff. Allen, who was arrested last week by Marshal Stevens, at Beaver Dam, and placed in jail for stealing clothing and jewelry from Mr. Goddab, of Beda, made his escape from jail here last Tuesday night. His examining trial was to have taken place on the next day, and, as Jeff. thought his chances good for a visit to Frankfort at this next term of the Criminal Court, did not let an opportunity pass to escape. He had not been heard from up to this writing.

Street at Coal.

Before laying any where else, be sure to call on us, and we guarantee to sell stores at Louisville prices, with only the addition of carriage added, which will be cheaper than can be had in the Green River Country. KELLY & CO.

Mr. E. M. Rosenberg, who has been absent for several months, visiting friends and relatives in Louisville, Jeffersonville, and other cities, returned home last week.

The work of every description does with regard to all our offices, and we have a full line of jobs, and will do the printing of the business community.

The Corn.

The corn along the Hawesville road is simply splendid. We noticed one field on the farm of Mr. Sam. Hald, in full bloom and tassel. Sam. Newcomb's new ground corn is reaching upward, and will require all of Sam.'s growing energies to keep up with it. "Squire G. S. Hamilton's corn is excellent, and to take it as a whole—about thirty acres—in the "boss camp" of that section.

On one of a time, a lady noted for her big words more than for the meaning conveyed by the language used, took up her abode in Judge Worthington's, who lived where Island Station, McLean County is now located. When asked if she would take tea or coffee, she replied, "no." She was again asked if she would have cream and sugar in her tea; she replied, "Sugar; no cream." The superiority of the cream destroys the flavoring of the tea, and makes it less epicure.

The Corn.

The following is a list for the various county candidates announced to speak: Butler's Place, Wednesday, July.....17 Fordsville, Thursday, July.....18 Mt. Zion, Friday, July.....19 Taylor's Field School, July.....20 Rock Hill, Saturday, July.....21 Buck Hill, Wednesday, July.....22 West Point Church, Thursday, July.....23 Equality Church, Friday, July.....24 Beaver Dam, Saturday, July.....25 Rockport, Monday, July.....26 Pleasant Valley Church, Tuesday, July.....27 Cromwell, Wednesday, July.....28 Old Bennett's, Saturday, August.....29

Public Speaking.

We invite the attention of our readers and the traveling public generally to the advertisement of the Planters' House, Owensboro, Ky., in the HERALD. This hotel has been refitted, rechristened and thoroughly renovated, and now stands second in none in the Green River Country. It is well ventilated rooms, comfortable beds, unsurpassed fare, cheap rates, a kindly, genial proprietor, clever, wide-wake clerks and attentive waiters have nothing to do in constituting a first-class hotel, this hotel is certainly entitled to that rank. We do not speak recently of trying it itself, and know whereof we speak. We recommend it to the consideration of a generous public.

A CARD.

ALLENVILLE, Ky., July 6, 1878. I have come in possession of several circulars addressed to several of our citizens purporting to be a price-list from George Klein & Bro., of Hartford. And we feel it is our duty to inform you of the contents of said circulars. After careful examination we find that he proposes to sell goods to them at prices that do not correspond with what you paid for the same article.

And to substantiate what we say, we will publish his own figures for your perusal.

No. 7 Farmer 4 hole step-stove, $ 8 00 No. 7 " " " " 10 00 Complete with tin-war and pipe. Tin guttering and spouting in 10 or 12 foot joints, made to fit together, at 5 cents per foot.

Cast hollow ware, 21 cents per pound and other articles that are reduced in proportion. All these articles are marked from $3 to 100 per cent less than offered to you. We do not publish this for any malice or ill will that we entertain for Klein & Bro., but for the benefit of his customers. And after they have been informed of the facts above stated, do you think it is your interest to still give them your patronage? We have sold several of the circulars that he sent to persons here, and all we ask is to compare what they paid with what he proposed to sell to persons here.

Citizen of Ohio county, what do you think of a firm that has grown independent from your continued patronage; who will sell to strangers in a distant county, prisons they are under no obligation to whatever, at from $3 to 100 per cent cheaper than will sell to you, people who have built them up and made them what they are?

Mr. J. S. Olin authorizes us to withdraw his announcement as a candidate for Justice. He is physically unable to make a canvass of the county and thinks it best under all the circumstances, to decline being a candidate longer. He is thankful to those persons and friends who manifested an interest in his be-

CONSCIENCE.

An Essay Written by H. B. KIRKWOOD, and Read at the Hartford Debate, July 6, 1878.

A sense of obligation existing in the mind, if those judgments respecting what is right, with which the sense of obligation becomes from time to time increased. With respect to particular nations, opinion determines whether they be good or bad; and conscience approves or disapproves in consequence of that determination, whether it be in favor of truth or falsehood. By conscience all men are restrained from intentional ill, infallibly directs us to avoid guilt, but is not intended to secure us from error. We see that the great Creator in His wise formation of man, saw fit to invest him in his fallen state with a true moral guide, which He intended to remind him, when upon the eve of transgressing His laws, that he would commit an error in so doing. Experience has taught each of us that this faculty, which is always on the alert, never errs in its promptings, and should we always follow its precepts, it is certain we should never err. But this internal monitor has never been invested by the Author of our being with any control over our moral acts, except so far as its influence extends, and man is thus left a free, moral agent, with this beacon light which guides from the divine presence. It would seem that this divine light is a spark of man's primitive purity, and is placed in him for the purpose of guiding him back to paradise. We see that without Christianity is a true, moral guide, as history of nations of antiquity affords no convincing proofs. We cite, for instance, the Roman Republic, the mightiest government that ever existed, the equity, clemency and wisdom of whose laws are almost unexampled and never surpassed, even in this advanced age of Christianity and civilization. The workings of this powerful faculty was the only attributable cause of the exalted virtue and disinterested patriotism of such men as Cincinnatus, Regulus, Fabius, Curius, the Scipions and many others. Yet these virtues, however praiseworthy had no other foundation than human and natural motives, and were even often found by the side of baseness, vanity or some other vice, that they could not deserve supernatural reward at the hands of the Sovereign Judge, thus conclusively proving that conscience is not dependent upon, or necessarily associated with religion—but is an innate sense of moral duty which the Supreme Being has given to each of His created intelligent beings in the same degree of perfection. The opinions of the most able Metaphysicists and Philosophers unanimously concur in defining conscience as a sense of right and wrong concomitant with human nature, and the sole vestige of the purity of man in his first estate. It is intended by the Author of our being as an indication of His property in us, and of our original resemblance to Him. After a consideration of the component parts of the wonderful organism of man, we conclude that the Cecos not only intended this faculty as the crowning object of His endowment in man, but also as a kind of divine light which should demonstrate to him paths of rectitude, always unfolding its influence in favor of right and justice. He has not, however, ordained or intended that it shall secure us from error, since He has made man the artist and architect of his own destiny, but has, in this infinite mercy, given him this moral sense as a counselor and guide to direct him aright. To the influence of this innate adviser was Rome indebted for the noble self-sacrificing patriotism of Cato, the most formidable and implacable enemy of usurpation and tyranny, as he was the most zealous and enthusiastic friend and champion of liberty and justice. Willist Cato was yet a boy, during Sylla's administration, his preceptor often took him to pay his respects to the dictator. The house of Sylla at that time looked like a place of execution, so great was the number of people put to death by his orders. Cato deplored the scenes of blood every where manifested, asked why there was no one who would undertake to kill the monster, being answered "that it was because he was more than all who hated him;" then said he, "why don't you give me a sword that I may kill him, and thus deliver my country from slavery?" This clearly shows that the sense of discrimination between right and wrong was no acute in the boy as it was in after years in the stern unflinching patriot who would'd or die for honor justice and liberty. Hence we see that the child after it has attained years of accountability, has this faculty as fully developed as it ever is, although its field of action is evidently different, and, perhaps, its existence has never been as forcibly manifested, owing to the fact that the powers of thought and action have not been developed in the same degree.

HAYNESVILLE LETTER.

HAYNESVILLE, KY., July 4, 1878.
Editor Herald:

Farmers in this locality are about through plowing corn. Corn on high ground looks well—that on bottom land looks bad. There is not over half a crop of tobacco seen in this vicinity. Wheat is all harvested, but the most of it is still in the shock. There is great complaint by the farmers of their oats. They say the chinch-bugs are very thick over them.

I suppose "Sweeper," of this place, has played out farming, as he is practicing law at Hawsville.

The Herald is welcomed by a large number of readers. It is read by every family in this locality.

There is a report being rumored about the large snake that ran Mr. Jordau Hayes four miles. It was fifteen feet long, and it would have overtaken him when it was shot by Mr. Charlie Hayes. Pretty large snake for this place. Who can beat it?
